CASUALTIES IN THE CAVALRY COMMAND.

Mr. Wm. H. Steiner's Despatch.

CITY OF NEW YORK, May 11, 1864.

Under the direction of General A. E. Kautz, of whose staff I am, the operations of the cavalry command have been on the most extensive scale, and resulted in great success. Late last evening some of the wounded came in, first, who informed me that a part of the division was closely following them; and from the former I have been enabled to gather some inconspicuous reports of their proceedings.

THE ORDER TO ADVANCE.

It was given on Wednesday, the 4th instant, and the division having been properly organized and prepared, the order to march early on the morning of the 5th instant was obeyed with the greatest alacrity. Col. S. H. Miles, Third New York Cavalry, commanding the First Brigade, and Col. G. P. Spear, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, the Second Brigade. Ratios sufficient for the command were provided, as also ammunition for the carbines, revolvers and mountain howitzers, and forage for the horses.

THE FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

On leaving our intrenchments near Portsmouth, known as Getty's Station, General Kautz took the straight road to Suffolk, and from there to Andrews Corner. The greatest caution was used in this advance. Flankers were thrown out to give the earliest alarm of an advancing force, but no opposition was met, and before daylight of the 6th inst. our cavalry reached Waverly bridge. Finding no rebel force here, General Kautz pushed on to the left of the light of the night house, where a small rebel force was encountered, who fired a volley into our troops and retreated. Lieutenant Freidrichson, of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, Assistant Adjutant General to General Kautz, was badly wounded. He made his way, however, to Fort Powhatan, and was brought here on the steamer Curlew the next day. Company A, of the Eleventh Cavalry, led the advance.

ON THE SECOND DAY.

The column in a body left the water bridge, and went to White's Station on the Norfolk and Petersburg Railroad. The opposition met thus far from the enemy was but slight, and was mostly from guerrillas. From Whitford Station our forces proceeded to Littleton, where they found the Norfolk river and continued their march on and through Stony Creek bridge, on the Western and Petersburg Railroad, which was reached on Saturday night. At this place the Third New York Cavalry encountered a rebel force, commanded by Colonel Tabb, who gave them battle, and our loss consisted of one lieutenant killed and some eight or ten men wounded. The rebels, however, were routed, with a loss equal to, if not more than our own. This finished the third day's work, which was terminated with that of the second.

A REBELS AND VICTORY.

Colonel Spear's brigade was detached on the next morning, and pushed forward to a station seven miles from Stony Creek, towards Weldon. Owing to the density of the woods some fifty of our men were dismounted to act as skirmishers. A rebel force, made up of troops, dismounted to fight, and was superior numbers, the enemy had the advantage of the light, and drove our men from the woods. At this point, however, reinforcements from the Fifth Pennsylvania Cavalry, who were also dismounted, arrived, and after a sharp engagement, the rebels were in their turn driven, and the woods cleared of them. Our loss consisted of three killed and eight wounded.

DESTRUCTION OF PROPERTY.

Having pursued the enemy a distance of three miles, our troops returned and fired to the station, destroying some hundred thousand dollars worth of pork and a large amount of other property. The latter was then appropriated to use for their cattle.

A BATTLE ON AN IMPROVED POSITION.

Leaving the station, Spear's brigade met the Third New York Cavalry, and a quantity of some three miles the other side of the station, engaging a heavy force of rebels under Tabb. It appears that the latter, after meeting our troops on the railroad, returned to his intrenchments. Our cavalry dismounted and charged the batteries, but, having no infantry to support them, were compelled to retire. The rebels, however, did not follow, and our men were able to return to their own position. Being on a straight road and only five miles from the station, our cavalry turned on the railroad and commenced the march towards City Point, where they arrived last evening.

THE REBELS.

As near as I can ascertain, the dismounted elements of the wounded men who came in advance of the main column, is the destruction of an immense tract of land, which will be sold to the Government, and the arrangements for traveling for six days, exhausting all the ration taken along, General Kautz, not being able to subsist on the ration, came to the conclusion that the storage was found plenty, but the country he raised through is entirely depleted of provisions.

ON THE 10TH.

considering the large force and extent of territory traveled over, and the operations fought, was very light. The entire number, as far as can be ascertained, amounts to but forty-five killed and wounded. The wounded have been sent forward by Dr. Charles McOrack, the chief Medical Director, to Fort Monroe, where they will be cared for by Dr. R. H. McCall, Acting Medical Director at that point. Your correspondent with the cavalry corps will furnish the details of the expedition. My statement is only such as I could pick up from the wounded.

THE GENERAL PRESS DESPATCHES.

BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND, May 10, 1864.

Nothing definite has yet been accomplished by our forces in the way of captures, but everything looks favorable.

Beauregard, with about 20,000 men, is in Petersburg, and has cut the railroad out leading to this city and forces enough to keep Beauregard there until he surrenders.

We shall, it is reported, soon commence a siege of the place.

There are four monitors and several gunboats with four miles of Fort Darling, ready to co-operate with our land forces (a part of them) abreast of the monitors. Our forces occupy a strong position, and are strong enough to hold it, and as soon as Petersburg is taken, to advance on Fort Darling with land and water force; and with the will and determination existing in our ranks, there is no doubt of success.

It is supposed that General Kautz is now to the south of Petersburg, aiming at the destruction of railroads leading south from Richmond. Correspondents have probably announced his defeat, many of his troops captured, &c. It is not believed here. Beauregard has no cavalry.

FOURTH MONDAY, MAY 11, 1864.

Fighting was going on all day yesterday. The main point appeared to be on our right. The troops were under command of General Smith. The triumph between Richmond and Petersburg was the bone of contention up to three P. M. to-day. Nothing later has been received.

Mr. Dobb, of Norfolk, lately connected with the Old Dominion, was sent to the front to-day, to be sent into the rebel lines, as a confirmed rebel.

Petersburg has not been abandoned, burned, nor as yet besieged. Beauregard is there in command. Fort Darling is still in the hands of the rebels.

The bark Dame Jordan, ashore near Cape Henry, with a cargo of iron, steel, block tin, &c., will prove a total loss.

A report just received states that Colonel Spear has burned the long bridge, near Weldon, and two others; that he made three charges, and the third time succeeded.

I give this for what it is worth. My informant heard Colonel Spear tell it.

The following additional names of wounded have been received within the last twenty-four hours from General Butler's army:

Colonel Spear told it.

From the latest accounts received from the front up to last night, it is known that General Butler's forces were within three miles of Petersburg, and had passed the outer lines of the rebel defences. This is important, as it more closely puts up Beauregard's command within the city.

THE OUTER DEFENCES OF PETERSBURG.

CITY POINT, MAY 11, 1864.

From the latest accounts received from the front up to last night, it is known that General Butler's forces were within three miles of Petersburg, and had passed the outer lines of the rebel defences. This is important, as it more closely puts up Beauregard's command within the city.

General Kautz's Junction with General Butler.

[Correspondence of the New Republic.]

THE MILITARY NORTH OF PETERSBURG, VA., MONDAY MORNING, MAY 10, 1864.

General Kautz, who left Suffolk last Wednesday, with a heavy cavalry force, joined General Butler last evening. During his march he crossed the Blackwater river, and, proceeding through the enemy's country, recovered the Blackwater at Smith's bridge from thence through Surrey county, Prince George's county to City Point. During the march he was followed by the enemy, who made several attempts to cut him off, but he was able to evade them, and had quite a skirmish with Hoke's brigade. There was great rejoicing at headquarters over the success of General Kautz's exploit.

General Butler is now in motion toward Richmond. Nothing could equal the enthusiasm of the men; and when it leaked out that they were to be led on to Richmond, each man seemed moved as if by some personal impulse.

General Butler did a characteristic thing yesterday. Upon learning the exact rank of the commander of the army garrison which led the ascent of the James river on Thursday, he ordered that he be promoted from a lieutenant to a captain.
